come British ambassador to the United States. "I am sorry I am unable to make any statement," he told newsmen before shoving off in the launch-ing that took him to the fourengined navy patrol plane, "but I am in the hands of the navy for the day and I'm sure they'll take good care of me.' Speculation on the possibility that the former king might rep-resent his nation officially at Washington was stirred afresh early today when the duke's aide de camp, Captain Vyvyan Drury, dis-closed through a press representative that Windsor was flying in a naval plane today to "an undisclosed destination on important official business." It was added that the state department wished all details withheld at present. Before news of the flight was released, the Miami Herald published a story saying "it was learned in Miami Thursday" that the duke "will be given the opportunity of accepting or declining appointment as British ambassador to the United States before the post left vacant by the death of Lord Lothian is offered anyone else."

The fact that Secretary of State Hull, extending the government's condolences, offered "all facilities at our disposal" led some to believe that the customary gesture would made, regardless of the war abroad.

A few officials, however, expressed doubt, pointing out that any warship bearing Lord Lothian's body homeward would have to risk mines, torpedoes and aircraft of a very active combat zone. They
